Auld Lang Syne

The end of the year (how did that happen so fast?) is a time for reflection and resolution. That holds true in both the personal as well as professional life. At the Broward County Bar Association, I am pleased to look back on a year that was productive, innovative, and added another layer of providing value to our members.

At the BCBA, 2015 continued the strong programming that has become a hallmark of our organization. Starting in January with the Judicial Robing of four new Circuit Court judges and three County Court judges, the year continued with our Legislative Affairs

Reception, Oral Arguments and Reception from the 4th District Court of Appeals, the annual Raising the Bar Seminar presented by our Family Law Section, and our Law Day program featuring keynote speaker David Prodder, British Consul General in Miami.

In June we saluted the new BCBA Board of Directors at our Installation Dinner. The second half of the year welcomed the second year of our very successful Legal Malpractice Summit, Constitution Day Reading & Reception, the Roger H. Staley Memorial Real Property Seminar, and the New Attorney Orientation. We also enjoyed the presentation of the 2015 BCBA Bench & Bar Convention that offered a variety of seminars and was very well received. Of course, the year cannot come to a proper close without our annual holiday celebration.

This year ushered in the commencement of some new programs that have immediately become BCBA traditions. New series included Masters of Trial, Women Leaders in the Law, and the Young Lawyers Section Boot Camp sessions. The BCBA also addressed our country's changing relationship with Cuba in the Cuban Engima: What Every Attorney Needs to Know, and new social events included Open Mike Jams by our musician members, and a team of 40 that entered the Mercedes-Benz Corporate Run, proving there is something for everyone in the BCBA!

2015 was a year in which the BCBA exercised its voice by being one of the first voluntary bar organizations to take a stand on the proposal to allow attorneys to become members of the Florida Bar through reciprocity. Our members took an interest in the issue and voiced their opinions. While not everyone agreed on the matter, this outcry revealed that BCBA members are engaged and involved.

The BCBA staff is already busy planning the events for 2016. We resolve to continue providing a variety of stellar programming to our members. On behalf of the BCBA Board of Directors and staff, we thank you for a wonderful year and we hope that 2016 is a healthy, happy and prosperous year for us all. B

Jeffrey M. Wank

Finding the Ideal Work-Life Balance

With the advent of smart phones and technology advancing at a rapid pace, finding the ideal work-life balance has become increasingly more difficult. For starters, our profession demands prompt responses and has come to expect quick turnaround answers. Young lawyers know all too well that not responding promptly can result in negative feedback. With all of us carrying smart phones, it is practically a guarantee that an e-mail or text is received just as quickly as it was sent. It is hard to say we are ever truly disconnected from work.

The situation I routinely find myself in, and often dread, is deciding when to put the phone down. At this stage of my life, my family consists of my beautiful wife, Alice, and me (of course certain adjectives are essential to this article). At the dinner table, there is a constant "ding" coming from the other side of the room, signaling a new e-mail, text message, or voicemail. At night, whether I am at the gym (obviously a few times a week), or sitting on the couch watching television, responding to work related e-mails have become routine. At times I have found myself communicating with my wife in between email responses. Many young lawyers have children and desire quality family time uninterrupted by "reply all" and "urgent" emails.

This got me thinking: Is it okay to take a break from family time on a Sunday to respond to an e-mail that can wait until Monday morning? Should we respond to work questions during dinner? Do the quick responses actually help or hurt in the long run?

Of course one quick Google search on this topic brings up hundreds of articles from so called experts, with the theme suggesting that we should all strive to find a healthy work-life balance unique to each individual. Personally, I continue to try and disconnect from work during vacations, dinner, and family time. Admittedly, it has become increasingly more of a challenge. Nonetheless, I implore all lawyers to strive to find that ideal work-life balance. Certainly it will never be perfect, but the effort to put the phone down, truly listen to your loved ones, and be present in the moment, will go a long way. I would suggest that not only will it strengthen your relationships, but also you will find that emphasizing a goal of reaching a work-life balance will reinforce the values in which you cherish the most. And while I am not advocating a change to the modern "quick-reply" e-mail when appropriate, I hope you will consider disconnecting each day for an amount of time appropriate to reach your ideal work-life balance. Perhaps my boss said it best as I was leaving the office last month for a weekend getaway: "Don't worry, the work will be here when you return!"

Everyone can use a helping hand now and then.

At Bienenfeld, Lasek & Starr LLC, we believe in the right team of people, a strong commitment to help others, and having a real impact. That is the mission of our practice and the “helping hand” we offer to our community.

It’s also the reason we are proud to support the Broward County Bar Association.

We are honored to be involved with an organization with a strong dedication to its members and a solid commitment to raising the “bar” in the legal community.

GOING FOURTH

Musings From The Fourth District Court of Appeal “The Tremendous Efficacy of The Pretrial Stipulation”

by Alan Bryce Grossman

In a recent opinion, Chief Judge Ciklin, writing for the Fourth District, reminded litigants that the pretrial stipulation “is surely one of the most coveted and effective pretrial devices enjoyed by the trial court and all involved parties.”¹ Stressing the “tremendous efficacy” of “The Pretrial Stipulation” (lead capitals intended by the Court), the call is out to the trial bar to remember that the pretrial stipulation is “a powerful blueprint that fully enables a well-run and fair trial ... and should be strictly enforced.”

The final agreed upon ‘executive summary’ [is] what the impending trial is about and [sets] the specific issues that remain on the table,” Ciklin wrote. “[M]ost importantly,” he continued, is that the issues to be tried become “memorialized in The Pretrial Stipulation.” And only those issues are “officially considered to be an issue” for trial.

In an opinion from 2011, the Court took the insurer’s trial counsel to task for improper “gotcha” trial tactics for pushing the trial court to include in the jury instructions an issue that had clearly been resolved by agreement in the stipulation. In reversing judgment for the insurer on an abuse of discretion standard, the Court wrote that the trial court had “impermissibly abandoned the stipulation.”²

The Fourth District placed blame for the abandoned stipulation squarely on the shoulders of trial counsel. “Our system of justice depends upon lawyers as officers of the court. Here, insurance counsel abandoned that role and engaged in gamesmanship by failing to honor the stipulation.” The Court relied on Broward Circuit Court’s Local Rule 9 that states that “stipulated facts requir[e] no proof at trial” and that the form of a filed joint pretrial stipulation consists of a “statement of disputed issues of law and fact to be tried.”

The Court holds the trial bar to a high standard once The Pretrial Stipulation has been agreed and filed as required by Rule 1.200 and Local Rule 9. Litigants should take the time and care to ensure that the issues they intend to present at trial are properly presented in the stipulation, or they may be deemed as waived, including factual and legal issues as well as objections to the admissibility of documents and witnesses’ testimony, and other matters.

There may still be the ability to correct a later perceived error contained within the filed Pretrial Stipulation. The standard is high, but matters may be withdrawn from the stipulation “by making a reasonable motion to withdraw the pretrial stipulation by a showing of good cause.”³ A heavy burden is placed on the requesting litigant and such relief will be denied where it appears that the stipulation was voluntarily undertaken and there is no indication that the agreement was obtained by fraud, misrepresentation, or mistake of fact.

Conversely, the trial court has the discretion to decide issues that are outside of the agreed stipulation where reaching such an issue is implicit or necessary to resolve issues that are properly before the court. In one case the pretrial stipulation did not contain any stated issue as to the final disposition of the sales proceeds following the resolution of who actually owned real property.⁴ Once that matter was determined at trial, the trial court then ordered the losing party to turn over the proceeds from the sale of the property to the true former owner. That order “was a necessary consequence” based on the court’s determination of the true property owner, an issue that was included in the pretrial stipulation. Thus, the circumstances of the case can permit the trial court to determine an omitted issue as a natural extension of the stated issues.

Even though pretrial stipulations are to be strictly construed, they are also “not to be construed technically, but rather in accordance with their spirit and in furtherance of justice.” The art of agreeing to the pretrial stipulation is in having clear understanding of the issues that must be included in the trial, without inadvertently waiving issues that would ultimately prove important for success.

Because The Pretrial Stipulation is intended to bind the parties to the issues presented, the parties’ agreement to the stipulation must be made with extreme care and advocacy. Trial counsel would be well served during the negotiation and preparation of The Pretrial Stipulation to be mindful of Chief Judge Ciklin’s view that “the trump card upon which all parties to any litigation can virtually always rely is the Pretrial Stipulation.” B

New Courthouse: Who's Moving Where

With each passing day, significant construction progress continues on the interior of the new courthouse. The project is now 91% complete and finishing touches are visible everywhere. Exterior glass installation is complete. A quick scan of the second through twentieth floors reveals new wall tiles and gypsum board wall finishes, wall paneling, flooring, and acoustical ceiling panels. Architectural woodwork is being installed on the lower floors hearing rooms and courtrooms. The temporary covered walkway at Courthouse Drive is now complete. Work is underway and ongoing for the entry canopy. Final connections for emergency generators are ongoing while service elevators are fully functional. Construction continues to move forward at a fast and steady pace with an anticipated completion date of late 2015. A move date is still not confirmed. When the move does begin, it will last three months, and everyone who is relocating will be moved in phases. There are 10 move phases. The below diagram show who's moving where. B

The State of Pro Bono in Florida

The 17th Judicial Circuit's Pro Bono Committee met on Friday, October 30 to hear an update on the state of pro bono in Florida. The update was delivered by Alan Pascal, Esq., former chair of the Pro Bono Committee and the Chief Discipline Officer of the Fort Lauderdale Branch of The Florida Bar, who participated in a meeting with representatives from all of the Florida Judicial Circuits in September 2015. Pascal noted that there is a positive increase in the number of attorneys providing an increased number of pro bono service hours as well as making financial contributions. He also brought attention to our local Young Lawyers Section of the BCBA and highlighted the role that they have played in promoting pro bono service in Broward County. Pascal explained that the Young Lawyers Section "actively promotes and supports the Legal Aid Advice and Counsel Hotline, recruiting volunteer attorneys and advocating for support throughout the year. These young attorneys have made a significant difference in the number of people who receive free civil legal assistance in our community and serve as an example to all."

Eye Towards the Future

by Shari Scalone

Lawyers, in general, are highly goal oriented. We typically measure ourselves through the lenses of the Court, our colleagues, and our clients. As such, we tend to compare ourselves to an ideal version in an effort to reach that very goal. Seeking perfection can have its negative consequences, but what if we can use that drive to be successful at living up to our resolutions?

In the business world, including the legal arena, we have been presented with “SMART” goals: Specific, Measurable, Achievable, Relevant, and Time-bound. This acronym has been used to help achieve unambiguous, concrete, and realistic plans. The health benefits of this model are significant in that they provide a clearer focus, optimize our use of time, and offer clarity in our decision-making. All these factors yield lower stress levels, manifest with higher confidence and optimism, and can bring about overall satisfaction personally and professionally.

Nevertheless, I challenge you to consider “CLEAR” goals as a framework as well.¹ CLEAR stands for Collaborative, Limited, Emotional, Appreciable, and Refinable. “Collaborative” refers to interacting with others, i.e. staff and colleagues, in a manner that encourages teamwork and respect. “Limited” serves to keep goals manageable in regard to scope and duration. “Emotional” seeks to promote passion and positivity among our interactions with others. “Appreciable” provides structure, allowing large goals to be broken down into smaller ones. Lastly, “Refinable” attempts to add flexibility as new information and situations arise. Having this framework can boost a powerful, yet holistic way, to coalesce your goals into a complete vision for life.

With the upcoming New Year, we can make resolutions to develop a healthy environment at home and in the office, foster old and new relationships, and be mindful that the practice of law goes beyond success and failure. We can aspire to accept our boundaries and foster wisdom, tolerance, and compassion. With an eye towards the future, let us still make time to immerse ourselves in the present and be. B

Any mention of “diversity” generally conjures up notions of conflict and inequality, which is precisely the barrier Caryn Carvo and Laura Varela broke down at the 2015 Broward County Bench and Bar Convention.

Even in the 1970’s, and as a young law student at St. John’s University School of Law, Carvo felt it unnecessary to downplay her differences in order to get ahead. Varela felt the same way two decades later at the University of Florida College of Law. Today, Carvo is managing partner at Caryn Goldenberg Carvo, PA, and a major player in South Florida’s family law and business litigation practice areas. Rather than just focus on immediate results, Carvo brings a holistic approach to her practice by serving the client and takes into account the ramifications of any given course of action. Varela, formerly with Phillips, Cantor, Shalek, Rubin & Pfister, P.A., is a seasoned civil litigator with a heart for pro bono. Next Spring, Varela will join the faculty at Nova Southeastern University College of Law.

The powerhouse duo co-chaired the committee organizing the Convention. The two year endeavor aimed to offer cross-training opportunities, address current events in family law and its implications to other practice areas, engage different generations in technology discussions, select fitting keynote speakers and recruit prolific judicial panels. More than 400 participants registered for the event held on October 23 at the Broward County Convention Center. The Convention gathered South Florida attorneys and judges under the banner of “All in One Day... One Place.”

The event opened with a breakfast plenary, a no-nonsense crisis management exchange with Bruce Hennes, and a myriad of discussions and presentations. During a judicial panel, Judge Renee Goldenberg announced the creation of an award christened the Foxy, in honor of past Florida Bar President James Fox Miller, to be bestowed to those who advance women and minority participation in the workplace.

The morning activities were followed by a premier quality lunch, and speeches by Chief Justice Jorge Labarga and Florida Bar President Ramon Abadin. Participants also connected with top notch exhibitors and parted with a great deal of legal industry insight — not to mention a smart selection of goodie bags.

The best parting gift had to be Chris DeSantis’ presentation at the afternoon plenary on Redefining Generational and Cultural Diversity in 2015. In his classic Socratic method, DeSantis dared Baby Boomers, Gen-Xers and Millennials of all genders and backgrounds to see “diversity” as the combination of life experiences and unique traits that overcome challenges and achieve business goals.

The day concluded with a networking cocktail reception hosted by Fiske & Company. Event sponsors Kelley/Uustal and Alpine Jaguar were specially recognized for making the Convention possible. In the end, Carvo and Varela challenged our perspectives on diversity and inclusion, and in so doing, received a well-deserved award for delivering on the Broward Bar’s signature event. B

SUPREME COURT CLARIFIES HOW DOUBLE JEOPARDY RULE SHOULD BE APPLIED.

A defendant was charged with multiple offenses arising out of a home invasion which resulted in the death of the homeowner. The jury found him guilty of manslaughter with a firearm, attempted home invasion robbery with a firearm, and armed burglary. Acknowledging double jeopardy concerns, the State asked the court prior to sentencing to dismiss the attempted home invasion conviction, which carried a lesser sentence. The defendant argued that the court was required to dismiss the armed burglary conviction, which carried a higher sentence.

Ultimately agreeing with the defendant, the Supreme Court explained that double jeopardy prohibits conviction for two crimes where all of the elements of one crime are subsumed within the elements of the second crime, and that it is the conviction of the lesser crime which should be vacated. In this case, the greater crime was attempted home invasion, because it required proof of an additional element. The Court held that even though the crime of armed burglary carried a higher sentence, it was nonetheless the lesser crime, and that was the conviction that should be vacated. The Court resolved a conflict between the DCAs on this issue, clarifying that it must be based on the elements of the respective crimes and not the applicable punishments. State v. Tuttle, 40 Fla. L. Weekly S631 (Fla. Nov. 12, 2015).

FOURTH DISTRICT CERTIFIES QUESTION OF WHETHER THE LITIGATION

PRIVILEGE BARS A MALICIOUS PROSECUTION CAUSE OF ACTION.

Following a recent Third DCA opinion, the trial court held that a malicious prosecution claim was barred by the litigation privilege and entered summary judgment for the defendant. Thereafter, the Fourth DCA held that where all the elements of malicious prosecution are present, the privilege does not bar the claim. Since those elements were present in this case, the Fourth District reversed the summary judgment and certified to the Supreme Court the conflict between the Third and Fourth DCA opinions. Edwards v. Epstein, 40 Fla. L. Weekly D2550 (Fla. 4th DCA Nov. 12, 2015).

CRIMINAL CONTEMPT JUDGMENT MUST RECITE SPECIFIC FACTS SUPPORTING IT AND CANNOT RELY ON TRANSCRIPT.

After an outburst by an accused murderer during trial, including threatening a witness, the court stopped the proceedings, found the defendant in criminal contempt, and sentenced him to 30 days in the county jail. On appeal, the Third District reversed because the judgment did not contain a "recital of those facts on which the adjudication of guilt is based," as required by rule 3.830. Although the transcript demonstrated some of the behavior on which the contempt finding was based, the DCA held that the rule must be strictly followed. Accordingly, it reversed and remanded for the trial court to enter a judgment reciting those specific facts. Escoto v. State, 40 Fla. L. Weekly D2558 (Fla. 3d DCA Nov. 12, 2015).

FOURTH DISTRICT DISALLOWS ATTORNEY'S FEE CLAIM AS UNTIMELY IN CERTIORARI PROCEEDING, EVEN THOUGH RESPONDENTS HAD NO PRIOR OPPORTUNITY TO FILE THEIR MOTION.

Appellate rule 9.400(b)(2) provides that in original proceedings, a motion for attorney's fees must be served not later than the time for service of the petitioner's reply to the respondent's response to the petition. The rule is silent as to when, if at all, fees may be sought in defending a motion for rehearing. In this case, the Fourth DCA denied the insurer's petition for certiorari without requiring a response. However, the insurer then filed a motion for rehearing. Along with their response to that motion, the respondents filed a motion for attorney's fees. The DCA denied the motion for rehearing but also denied the fee motion as untimely, citing rule 9.400(b)(2). The opinion did not address how the respondents could have complied with the rule, or whether respondents are simply without recourse where petitioners seek rehearing. GEICO v. Moulthrop, 40 Fla. L. Weekly D2551 (Fla. 4th DCA Nov. 12, 2015).

Does My Client Qualify for a Sealing or Expungement in Florida?

by Robert Malove

Let's face it. No one wants to get arrested let alone have a criminal record. The collateral consequences of having a criminal record open to public scrutiny can be devastating. Client's call our office all the time to ask about getting their cases sealed and expunged. Others call because their mug shot has been plastered all over the internet. Let me share a few of the answers to frequently asked questions to educate attorneys who do not practice criminal defense about what can be done regarding clearing someone's criminal history record.

Please do not hesitate to call a qualified attorney if you have any questions about clearing up someone's criminal record or questions about any other criminal matter.

Q: My case was dismissed. Why do I have a criminal history record?

A: Under Florida law, all criminal history records are open to the public unless the record is sealed or expunged. Florida statute section 943.045(4) defines what is considered "criminal history information." Section 943.045(4) says:

"Criminal history information" means information collected by criminal justice agencies on persons, which information consists of identifiable descriptions and notations of arrests, detentions, indictments, informations, or other formal criminal charges and the disposition thereof. The term does not include identification information, such as fingerprint records, if the information does not indicate involvement of the person in the criminal justice system."

Q: I Won My Case and Want to Get My Arrest Record Cleaned Up. How Long Does it Take to Get My Record Expunged?

A: There are a few steps that need to be taken in order to get a case expunged. First, the State Attorney needs to approve the application, then the Florida Department of Law Enforcement (FDLE) needs to conduct a background check to confirm eligibility. Once FDLE approves, the Certificate of Eligibility needs to be filed with the court as an attachment to a motion for expungement. If your attorney knows what they are doing, it should not take more than approximately 9 months to have the job done.

Q: I was charged with DUI and beat the case. I was told that a DUI case cannot be sealed or expunged. Is that true?

A: Yes and no. Anyone who is found guilty of DUI cannot get their record sealed or expunged. Only qualifying cases where adjudication of guilt has been withheld are eligible to be sealed. For example, let's say a driver was arrested for DUI, but the charges were reduced to Reckless Driving and adjudication of guilt was withheld. The driver can get the case sealed. After 10 years, the sealed case can be expunged. If the driver was found not guilty of the DUI, they are eligible to apply to get the record expunged right away without having to wait 10 years.

Q: I have been arrested more than once. How many cases can I get sealed or expunged?

A: In order for someone to meet the eligibility requirements to have a record sealed or expunged, the applicant must be able to swear under oath that he or she has never previously had a record sealed or expunged in Florida or elsewhere. A person can only seal or expunge one arrest record. More than one case can be sealed or expunged only if the court finds that the arrests arise out of the same episode of facts.

If someone contacts you seeking advice about how to clean up their criminal history, and you do not know how to advise them, the best thing you can do is to contact a qualified attorney who is well-versed in the intricacies of criminal history record sealing and expungements. B
